This Cookie Notice explains how the Institute for Advanced Learning and Metacognition (IALM) uses cookies and similar technologies on its website. It should be read alongside our Privacy Policy.

What are cookies?

Cookies are small text files placed on your device when you visit a website. They are widely used to make websites work, to improve your experience, and to provide information to the site's owners. Similar technologies, such as pixels and local storage, work in comparable ways and are covered by this notice.

How we use cookies

We use cookies to enable the website to function, to remember your preferences, and to understand how the site is used so that we can improve it. The categories of cookie we use are:

Category	Purpose	Consent needed?
Strictly necessary	Enable core functions such as security, network management and accessibility. The website cannot work properly without them.	No
Functional / preferences	Remember choices you make (such as language or display settings) to improve your experience.	Yes
Analytics / performance	Help us understand how visitors use the site, usually on an aggregated and anonymised basis, so we can improve it.	Yes
Third-party / embedded	Set by third-party services we use, such as embedded videos or maps.	Yes

Your consent and choices

Strictly necessary cookies do not require your consent. We will only set non-essential cookies (such as analytics, functional and third-party cookies) with your consent, which we ask for when you first visit the site. You can change or withdraw your consent at any time using the cookie settings on our website, and you can also control or delete cookies through your browser settings. Blocking some cookies may affect how the website works.

Third-party cookies

Some cookies may be set by third parties whose services we use — for example, analytics providers or embedded content such as videos. These cookies are governed by the relevant third party's own privacy and cookie policies, over which we have no control.

Changes to this notice

We may update this Cookie Notice from time to time to reflect changes in the cookies we use or in the law. Any changes will be posted on this page.
