This page explains the terms on which the Institute for Advanced Learning and Metacognition (IALM) makes its website and content available, and signposts the Institute's main policies.

Using our website

Use of our website is subject to our Website Terms and Conditions and our Privacy Policy. By using the website, you agree to those terms.

General disclaimer

The information on our website and in our publications is provided for general information and educational purposes. While we take reasonable care to ensure that it is accurate and up to date, we make no warranty or representation that it is complete, current or error-free.

Nothing on our website constitutes professional, legal, financial or other advice, and you should obtain appropriate professional advice before acting on any information you find here. To the extent permitted by law, we accept no liability for any loss arising from reliance on the content of our website. Nothing in this disclaimer excludes or limits any liability that cannot be excluded or limited under applicable law.

External links

Our website may contain links to websites and resources provided by third parties. These links are provided for your information only. We have no control over the content of those sites, do not endorse them, and accept no responsibility for them or for any loss arising from your use of them. Please review the terms and notices of any third-party site before using it.

Intellectual property and use of our content

The content of our website is owned by, or licensed to, IALM. The reuse of our material is governed by our Copyright Statement. Where particular content is made available under a specific open licence, the applicable terms will be stated with that content.

Comments and contributions

Where our website allows you to post comments or other contributions, you are solely responsible for what you post. Content that is unlawful, defamatory, infringing, offensive or otherwise inappropriate is not permitted and may be removed. Further detail is set out in our Website Terms and Conditions.
